Non-Refereed Articles

Change is Gonna Come... 2013
Architecture Boston (Spring 2013)
An essay on the impact of online instruction on design and architectural education.

After Life 2010
Architecture Boston (Spring 2010)
A critical essay on what kind of adaptive re-use makes sense in the suburban landscape of malls, parking lots, and disposable buildings.

Its Own Thing: China's Struggle With Modernism 2010
Architecture Boston (Winter 2010)
A critique of the World Expo 2010 in Shanghai, and how the pavilions reveal fissures in architectural thinking in China.

The Next Layer: Boston in the Age of the New Towers 2007
Architecture Boston (Spring 2007)
A look at why towers are still with us and how they can work to be part of Boston's future.

Clean Slate 2007
Cover of the IDEAS section The Boston Globe (5/13/07)
A critique of the issues surrounding the re-design of Government Center and Boston City Hall. The article challenges the balance of architectural preservation versus the need for the city to grow in an incremental way.

In Defense of One Western Avenue 2006
Invited Article, Architecture Boston (Spring 2006)
An elaboration of the issues surrounding the unpopularity of the New Harvard Business School Dormitory. The article addresses the political, aesthetic, and cultural choices facing the contemporary city.

An Unsettling Look at the Future 2004
Op-Ed Piece, The Boston Globe (3/29/04)
A critique of the attitudes underlying the expansion of Harvard University's campus across the Charles River, and into Allston, MA. The piece addresses the design particulars of Machado and Silvetti's new One Western Avenue Dormitory for the Harvard Business School at the gateway to the new campus.

*What the City of Boston Needs is More People,
Not More Open Space* 2000

Op-Ed Piece, The Boston Globe

on environmentalism, urbanism and open space, (12/25/00) (subsequently featured on the Center for Urban and Regional Policy's website as the featured article in February, 2001.

Millennium Project Is Good For Boston 1998

Op-Ed Piece, The Boston Globe

on Turnpike Air-Rights Development Project, (12/3/98)
Advocates a tall building in the Back Bay, connected to a low scale in-fill set of structures crossing the turnpike.

"Long-Term Planning Needs an Urban Ring to It",
The Boston Business Journal, Commentary, June 2-8, 1995, p.13
This piece argues for using the urban ring as the paradigm for all major physical planning in the city and environs.

"The "Urban Ring" could join Boston and the Megaplex" 1995

Op-Ed Piece, The Boston Globe, (6/27/95)

This piece argues for considering the infrastructure of the city before deciding how and where to place a new Megaplex (convention center and/ or football stadium).
